

- 29 Which feature of some xerophytic leaves reduces the rate of transpiration by decreasing the water potential gradient between the internal leaf surface and the atmosphere?
- A a thick waxy cuticle on the upper surface of the leaf
 - B leaves reduced to spines with a small surface area to volume ratio
 - C stomata located in sunken pits on the leaf surface
 - D elongated leaves that are swollen storing large amounts of water