

- 16 Liver cells contain vesicles that have proteins in their membranes which are specific for the transport of glucose.

When these cells need to take up glucose, the vesicles fuse with the cell surface membrane.

How does the uptake of glucose occur?

- A exocytosis
- B diffusion
- C endocytosis
- D facilitated diffusion