

- 1 (a) ADH is a hormone that is released into the blood of a mammal when changes occur in the internal environment.
- (i) State one change in the internal environment of a mammal that leads to the release of ADH.
- [1]
- (ii) Name the part of the body that releases ADH into the blood.
- [1]
- (b) Fig. 1.1 shows a cell of one of the collecting ducts of the kidney.

not to scale

Fig. 1.1

Name membrane protein A and cell structure B.

A

B [2]

- (c) The phosphorylase enzyme stimulates structure B.

Describe the response of structure B to this stimulation and describe the consequences of this response.

[4]

[Total: 8]