

- 40 When an organ is transplanted from one person to another, rejection of the non-self organ must be avoided. At the same time, the immune system of the recipient must be maintained to prevent death from infections.

What prevents rejection of the transplanted organ?

- A continued activity of B-lymphocytes
- B natural active immunity
- C natural passive immunity
- D suppression of T-lymphocyte activity